

JOY TO THE WORLD... OR AT LEAST, TO YOUR HOME

Fill your home with things designed for function
—as well as delight

Spark Joy by Marie Kondo
indiebound.org

EVER SINCE MARIE KONDO'S book The Life-Changing Magic of Tidying Up actually, like, changed everybody's lives and resulted in the collective mass disposal of the varied and sundry things in the depths of our closets and the far reaches of our shelves, we've found ourselves in newly streamlined, impeccably tidy homes. Which is, you know, nice or whatever, but maybe a little empty? Maybe a little... devoid of joy? Maybe! But here's the thing: A big part of Kondo's manifesto (as well as the title of her newest book) is the incorporation of joy into your living space. In other words, once you've gotten rid of all the crap, you might as well fill your life with the things that make you happy. Here, then, are some things for your home that we think will bring you nothing but delight—a dramatically printed chair, a gleaming copper coffee pot, a brightly colored plate. Fill your home with these things, and we're pretty sure joy will follow. ♦

Eskayel Black Maple Sling Chair
eskayel.com

Gemstone Dish
scosha.com

Pepper Grinder
tomdixon.net

Tom Dixon Brew Cafetiere
tomdixon.net

